WING'D RALLY #1: TO AND FRO'

Greetings all.

Well, Gordon, Claude, Frankie and I rode to Wing'd Rider Rally #1 in Litchfield, IL. As much as I hoped to get one article in the newsletter that didn't refer to the weather, it's not to be. Yet.

On the way, we stopped to don raingear in Somewhere, Kentucky. During the process we reviewed the weather ahead of us on I-64 and decided to avoid an ugly-looking storm by detouring north on I-65 to Indianapolis, then south on I-55 to Litchfield. While adding a couple hours to the trip, the consensus was this was a prudent detour.

Ever heard the old adage, "Man plans, God laughs"? Well, here it is. Got to and through Indianapolis and headed south. Approaching Brazil, IN we rode into a storm as bad or worse than that which we were trying to avoid. Fortunately, just as it actually hit us, we exited the highway into a Pilot truck stop. The overhead at the gas pumps provided minimal shelter, as the rain was coming in sideways. I was completely, 100% drenched within 2 minutes. I stood there, actually feeling my boots fill with water. After parking, those of us on two wheels actually hung-on to the handlebars, hoping the addition of our respective body weight would prevent our machines from blowing over. Well, the worst of the storm (i.e., the wind) passed in about 5 minutes, but we stayed put as heavy rain and lightning everywhere continued for another 45 minutes or so. Our one-hour detour added more than three hours to our trip. This is the second time I have been riding my Gold Wing on an Interstate highway with a tornado nearby. It was scary the first time. It was scary the second time.

When we arrived in Litchfield, we learned that the storm we avoided swept through there, causing some property damage and knocking-over a few motorcycles.

The temperature was very hot, and these violent thunderstorms seemed to pop up everywhere in the late afternoon.

Battlefield News August 2023, VOL 35 ISSUE 8

On Saturday, we rode to Springfield and visited the Abraham Lincoln Museum. Riding through town, the damage, downed trees and evidence of flooding was everywhere. The museum was wonderful. As a child, my mother chaperoned a few class trips. When you were in Mrs. Herron's group you learned to read about each exhibit, examine it, discuss it; no hurry. Other kids would be running around like banshees, but we learned how to "do" a museum. I was grateful to find my three traveling companions did likewise. We spent all morning in the museum, and even sent Gordon back-in to view a short film when he thought he was holding up the group. We had a great lunch at a little cafe about 2 blocks away, and then headed back to Litchfield, hopefully before the daily afternoon rides to Munchkin land arrived.

As for the Rally: the exhibits were good; there was a nice discount on all purchases, which we all took advantage of. The Rally seemed to be well attended. After our adventure getting there, none of us took advantage of the planned rides. We did enjoy meeting and talking with folks who traveled from many distant areas.

Lest our journey home would lack excitement, just as we checked-in at the motel in Moorehead, KY, a tornado came through the small town. Fortunately for us, it was south of the motel, but the news that night showed some extensive damage to the local area. We headed east the next morning - quick, fast and in a hurry!! We all arrived home safe and sound. No Lollipop guild, no horse of a different color, no wizard.

Wing'd Rally #2 has already been scheduled for June 26-29, 2024, again in Litchfield. Not sure who will be up to that ride again, but I would like to get there in time for the opening ceremony, and perhaps stay 'til the end. We'll see.

We put just under 2,000 miles on our Wings, and the weather notwithstanding, I think it was an enjoyable trip.

Please review our chapter calendar for upcoming events. ROMEO Ride on Thursdays, 10am, Wawa at Route 1 & Harrison Road.

Our next chapter gathering is Wednesday, June 19 at Castiglia's on Courthouse Road. C'mon out for some good food, great company and always a LOT of laughs.

Joe Herron

Another month has gone by and my article writing still needs improvement. No rides for me this month but there's still a few weeks left. No recipes to share as I've been in a cooking slump. We had fun at Reclaim Arcade celebrating Marissa's 12th Birthday. She will be a teenager in less than a year

. Looking forward to our next gathering. Remember, you could be the next-door prize winner!

We can't decide "weather" we made a good decision!!!!

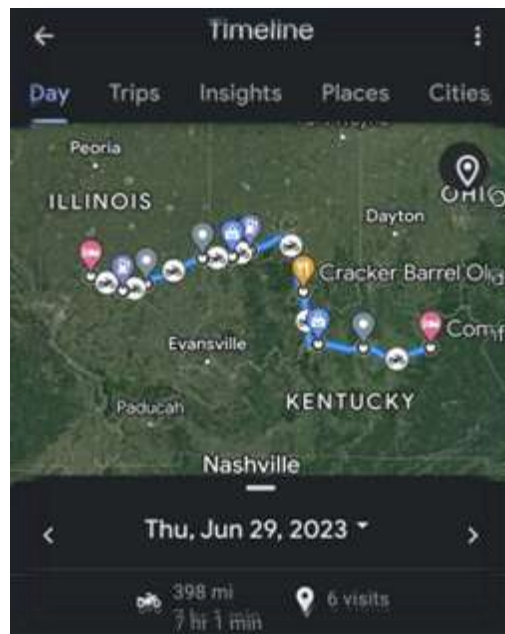

Let me explain. On June 28th, Frankie, Joe, Claude and I headed out for a 6-day trip to the first annual Wing'D Rider Rally in Litchfield IL. Our first day provided plenty of sunshine as we made our way to Morehead, KY to spend the night. This story is primarily about day 2. At breakfast we were looking at the weather along our intended route of I 64 to St Louis, then I 55 to Litchfield. We could see that the weather along I 64 was going to be dicey, so we decided to take an alternate route, at Louisville we would take I 65 North to Indianapolis, then take I 70 Southwest and work our way into

Litchfield. BIG MISTAKE. While still in Indiana on I 70, at a little town called Brazil, we almost met Jesus. As we were going along,

I noticed a tremendous blackened sky up ahead.

As I was leading, I radioed the guys and told them we were getting off at the next exit in a few miles. A half mile before our exit, we were hit by a derecho, straight line winds that the local weather channel said were 80 mph. All of a sudden, we had tree limbs (not twigs, limbs) flying by us and over our heads. We were dodging the bigger ones as best we could. The leaves were blowing in a circular pattern all around us. As we made our way down the exit ramp, the tractor trailers that had already pulled over were wobbling and I was afraid they would blow over on us. As I cleared the last trailer, the winds grabbed me and I almost dumped the bike. This is where I knew God was holding up my bike. I immediately turned into a Pilot Gas Station, pulled up to a pump, got off with my back to the pump, and held onto my bike for dear life for a few minutes. After the strong winds abated, thunder and lightning followed, so we spent a few hours sitting there waiting it out. Instead of getting to Litchfield around 4, it was closer to 8 when we finally got there. The next day found us registering and enjoying the venue. The second day was great as

Claude found that the Abraham Lincoln Museum in Springfield was only 39 miles north of us. We left in the morning and had a great time at the museum, then walked downtown to a great little hometown deli for lunch. After lunch, we headed back to the rally where we ran into our old buddy Mack (former Chapter E now living in Newport News). It was great to see him and you will have to ask us about his new ride. Day 5 we headed south on I 55, as we got to St Louis to get on I 64, again we saw menacing clouds to our west heading for us. We spent the next 5 hours staying in front of them as we headed back to Morehead KY to spend the night. Within 30 minutes of getting to our hotel, all hell broke loose from a severe storm that spanned 2 tornadoes within 20 miles of us. Day 6 we woke to good weather and headed home, but after a stop for lunch in W VA, another rain storm caught us and we rode those twisties on I 64 in W VA in the rain for about 30 minutes before we outran it. We all made it home around 4 on July 3rd safe but maybe not sound. I hope never to repeat that kind of weather again. It will take years to get the crease out that my butt made in my seat.

The Safety Benefits of GPS Devices on a Motorcycle

GPS (Global Positioning Systems) on a motorcycle can add to your safety when riding. This applies when taking short or long trips.

The GPS that most are familiar with are the devices that you use for routing. The more you know about your ride before you leave the safer you will be. Your safety is enhanced by knowing how far to your destination and what time will you arrive. You can also find gas stations and food along the way. They also alert you to curves in the road, speed limit changes and school zones. Some devices even tell you if there is a helmet law in that state. Most of these devices can be blue toothed to your helmet sound system so you hear the directions and alerts.

Another type of GPS device is the GPS tracking device that has become very popular in the last few years. These devices work off of a satellite system which provides increased reliability and range over cell phones. With devices such as the Garmin In-reach and Spot you can easily send an SOS signal and get help if you need it even when you are in remote areas without cell phone coverage. There are also options to have family and friends track you on your trip. You can also use the device in conjunction with your phone to text messages via satellite with either pre-set texts or typed texts. Many adventure riders and some road riders can be seen these days with these little orange devices hanging on their riding jacket or mounted on their bike. The outdoor sporting world in general are using these devices more often. There is usually a fee associated with these devices and the fee varies with the conveniences or features that you want to utilize.

The challenge to your safety with these devices is being sure not to look at them too long or playing with them too much while riding. That requires discipline on your part. The more you program into the device before you leave the safer the use of the device becomes. The goal is, of course, to have these devices add to your safety.

From Our Members:

Tech Tips from the Webmaster

Nobody likes to waste time. And although technology helps us save time in a myriad of ways, it can also slow us down.

From making quicker Google searches to changing the ways we interact with our smartphones, there are countless ways to speed things up using tech. Use these shortcuts on your PC, Mac, iPhone or Android device to put more time back into your day. Here are a few of my favorites.

Search Google with A Right-Click

Are you ever reading something online, see a term or person you're interested in, and want to learn more? To do it quickly in most browsers, right-click on the term in your browser and choose the "Search Google" option in the menu. Your browser will open a new tab and show you search results on the topic. The feature works in Chrome, Firefox, and Safari. But you won't yet find it in Microsoft Edge.

Find Stuff Quickly on Your PC Using Natural Language

Trying to find files tucked far away in folders across your Windows PC or Mac can be time-consuming. So, try using Windows Search/Cortana on Windows 10 or Spotlight/Siri on the Mac to find what you're looking for. Just type in your query. Before long, your PC or Mac will find what you need and you'll be off.

Cortana in Windows 10 and Spotlight (or Siri, if you want to talk) are both smart enough to understand natural language searches. So, for example, you can say "show me photos from last week" or "PDFs from December."

Quickly Access the Emoji Menu in macOS

If you just can't find the words to say what you feel and need a little emoji help on the Mac, it won't take long to find the right option. Just hold down the CTRL, Command, and Spacebar at the same time and an emoji list will be displayed. Click your emoji of choice and you'll be good.

On Macs, you can also activate this feature by pressing the button on the bottom-left that looks like a globe.

Macros Save You Time On Frequent Text Entry

If you often find yourself inputting the same text in Word, try creating a Macro. Go to the Word View pane and click on Macros. You'll be given the option to record a Macro. Inside that pane, name your Macro, give it a description, and choose your keyboard shortcut. Next up, go back to your Word document and type in the content you want. Once complete, click the Macros button again and stop the recording. Close out your document, open a new one, and either choose your keyboard shortcut or pick your Macro in the Macros pane to see how it works. Hope this small list of shortcuts makes your day more efficient and enjoyable. Now you know something others may not already knowing, and knowing is half the battle 😊 !
