On Saturday, June 1st, Mary Washington Hospital's trauma unit had their first ever "Arrive Alive Motorcycle Safety Rally". The E team had a vendor table at his event and we passed out GWRRA literature and Wing World magazines. A big thank you to all who helped and came by, Eddie and Rosa, Butch and Nancy, Julie, Frankie, Tony and Sharon, and especially Mark, our new MAD coordinator who also worked the table. There are photos of the event in this newsletter.

On a personal note, many of you know my grandson was diagnosed in June of 2006 with acute lymphatic lymphoma (ALL Leukemia) but has been cancer free now for 2 years. Well, Julie and I were honored to be at his elementary school promotion ceremony where he was promoted to middle school and the 6th grade. I have included a picture for those who know Christian.

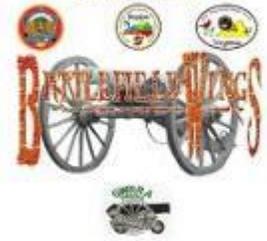

On June 14-16 I spent 3 days with some great GWRRA friends on a 3 state 1,310 mile motorcycle journey. We rented a cabin in Maggie Valley for 2 nights and rode our butts off all over the Great Smokey Mountains. To Greg, Larry, Jeff, Frankie and Claude, thank you for the memories, they will last a lifetime. You learn a lot about each other on these trips, but what happens in the Valley, stays in the Valley. We have included some pictures of our escapades.

Finally, some of us will be leaving for Wing Ding on July 2nd. I will write an article about our adventures for next month's newsletter.

Chapter Rider's Education

strategies to live by from Larry

Riders and Good Riders

Here is a quote lifted from a book I read; I think I've heard or read it before: "The difference between a rider and a good rider is how often they're actually surprised in traffic."

Boy, that sums up a lot. Before saying more I want to change this quote in a couple of ways (I can never leave well enough alone). First, let's not limit this to riders. Co-riders are just that, co-riders. Co-riders may not be manipulating the controls but they greatly influence the outcome of motorcycle maneuvers and having them surprised is not a good thing. The second change I'd like to make is dropping the last two words, "in traffic." A better rider will, for example, not be surprised to find mud on the pavement when riding through farm country during planting (or harvesting) season regardless of the traffic situation.

Surprise on a motorcycle is exciting but it's something we must all strive to avoid. You can attempt to avoid it in a number of ways. Riding such that you can safely stop within the sight distance ahead of you is a prime example. But, there is no guarantee here. An animal may dart in your path from out of nowhere. Maybe that's a surprise you just can't eliminate. But, riding within your sight distance certainly does eliminate the surprise of a stopped vehicle halfway around the blind corner.

Two other ways to avoid surprise also come to mind. They are less specific, will take more work on your part to implement, and will take more time to implement. But, there is no free lunch and we should expect to pay something to lessen the number of surprises we encounter while riding. The first of these less specific exercises is mental practice while the second is physical practice.

How do you mentally practice riding a motorcycle? How about "focused" day-dreaming? By focused I mean you've picked out a particular surprise to consider and now you are going to mentally watch yourself avoid it. Something like this: You see yourself enjoying a ride on your favorite twisty road when you encounter an oncoming pickup truck with a ladder rack and a ladder bouncing around and not fully tied down. You and the truck safely pass but you predict the truck had two ladders and one of them is now lying in your lane just around the next bend (or the bend after that, or further down the road). You increase your attention to the familiar road ahead to look for the lost ladder in your lane. You see it (no surprise) and avoid it without incident. Farfetched? Well, yes. I made it up and it and I made no attempt to make it realistic. I could have erred in the other direction; I could have chosen some very familiar situation but then maybe there would be no realistic surprise. Neither of these are very good for focused daydreaming (or whatever you choose to call your mental practicing). But, there are sources of surprises you could consider that are realistic but out of the ordinary. Books and magazines on riding can be a good source.

Knowledge for safe and fun Motorcycling!!!

So can the stories we hear about other riders who have encountered some situation we have never encountered. When you find a realistic but unusual riding situation discussed in print or around the campfire, take the time to really play it in your mind and successfully deal with it. Then, your brain will have “seen” this situation before if you really come across it later in your riding career and the chances of the surprise causing you to panic will be lessened.

I think I have less to say about physical practice. We all understand the value of physical practice. Speaking for myself however, I don't do enough structured practice. I've said this before in this column but I think a lot of us (me for sure) need more time in a safe environment (like one of the commuter lots on a weekend) practicing quick stops, swerves, and high-lean turns. Developing these skills really takes the edge off any surprise that does come your way because it increases your confidence (and decreases your apprehension) that you can deal with it. We have just started to have monthly parking lot practice sessions. These are a fun way to practice. If you get bored practicing on your own, get involved in these sessions if your schedule permits. And, if you need practice in some area you haven't seen addressed, please bring it to my attention so I can investigate how we can adjust our sessions to be more helpful.

Mental practice can help us in the “search” and “evaluate” phases of the SEE riding strategy while physical practice can help us with the “execute” phase. We can reduce the number of surprises we encounter and improve our reactions to the ones that still sneak through if we invest a little extra effort in being serious about safety.

Charlie and Ellen Smith

Hello fellow GWRRR riders,

I hope this newsletter finds you well and riding a lot. We've had a busy past couple of months with soccer for Samantha and T-ball for Benny. I think they both really enjoyed playing the game for the first time ever. Next year Samantha has decided she wants to play softball or T-ball, which ever she's of age to play so she can get a trophy like Benny did this year.

For Father's Day we took the kids fishing at Lake Orange and of course they're the only ones who caught anything. Benny even caught a turtle.

On May 19, 2013 Charlie and Jessica ran in the Historic Marine Corp Half Marathon. It also happened to be Jessica's 30th birthday. What a way to spend your 30th birthday, running hospital hill at mile 10. They both did a great job and the kids had fun cheering everyone on.

We hope everyone has a safe and lots of riding this summer. We are going to Colorado for a week and hopefully we'll have pictures for the next newsletter. Until then, be safe out on the roads and take care.

Ride to Smith Mountain Lake

My music minister calls the Roanoke Salem area God's Country

On Saturday over the Memorial Day weekend, a few quick calls were made for a pickup ride to Smith Mountain Lake Dam. As usual, Greg spent Friday evening planning a route going the longest way possible. I left my house at 5:30 am with Frankie and Mark, we picked up Greg and Jeff along the way, and made a stop at the Innwodd Restaurant in Gordonsville to fuel our bodies. Greg led us down route 15 through Farmville then to Route 40. Did I mention at this point we were not far from the North Carolina State line. We took 40 through Gretna, then turned off for the visitor center. I enjoyed reading how they built the dam and all the equipment used (see photos). After a 40 minute visit, we saddled back up on our trusted steeds, and headed back to Gretna for lunch and fuel. After lunch, we picked up Route 29 all the way to Charlottesville, then snaked our way back to Gordonsville and then to my home where Julie and Karen had prepared a nice feast for our famished stomachs. We rode 12 hours and 427 miles, a wonderful way to spend a nice Saturday.

This is the actual rail car used to move a cable back and forth over the dam to lower all the concrete and equipment down to the construction site of the dam

Jeff and Frankie trying to put the train back on the tracks

Notice the angled rails to keep it from tipping over.

Motorcycle Awareness Day at Mary Washington Hospital

This was the first year of the "Arrive Alive" motorcycle awareness event sponsored by Mary Washington Trauma Unit. There was great music and free food. The demonstrations of the police motorcycles and the stunt bike were awesome. I really don't know how they do it. They had activities for the little ones and a few vendors. We hope to see more of great exposure of motorcyclists like this.

LUNCH RIDE:

Jeff (Burke) led us in a ride to Shane's in Culpepper. (After Gordon had us tour four counties).

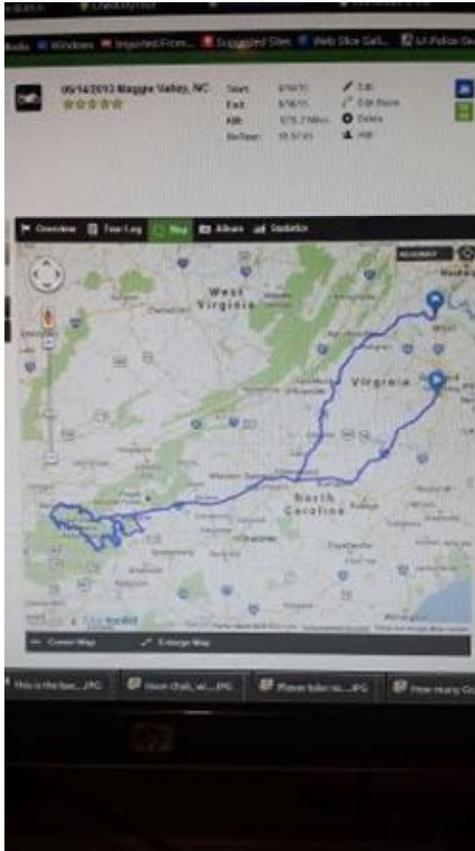

The food was phenomenal. We learned the hard way that when you go there bring a huge appetite or plan on sharing a meal. We had 2 more meals just from our doggie bags. It is definitely a place we're all going to return to. I dare anyone to try the Nacho Challenge. Eat the whole thing in 45 minutes and its free!

Tech Randomness from the Webdude

I usually have a hard time trying to get a newsletter article put together for the chapter. Travelling certainly doesn't make it any easier. It frankly makes it next to impossible! But as I am perusing the Great Oracle (some non-geek might call it Google), I am finding a common theme. Security.

I have babbled about security on several occasions on some specific topics, but I want to talk in general terms. All the way from shopping to online banking, consumers and businesses alike are susceptible to cybercrimes at all times of the day.

Most hackers and cyber-thieves flex their geeky muscles by writing malicious software as a hobby. They do this because they enjoy pushing the envelope and the boundaries that are the Internet. Most times they exploit vulnerabilities that exist in today's software programs such as Internet browsers and the operating systems that they run on. By posing as something that they are not, they can obtain a wealth of information from the consumer (or business) that will ultimately be used in ways that the consumer (or business) never intended. For example, identity fraud is very popular amongst cyber-thieves and can totally ruin a person's life, requiring years of repair.

The single most tip that I find on the Internet is absolutely ensuring that all of your software has the latest patches and security updates available. This will not guarantee your security. It will make it much harder for thieves to get what they want. If you are running a Windows computer, then make sure that your automatic updates is enabled and a firewall is running to ensure a proactive approach to securing your data. Encryption is another layer of security that you can add to things such as email.

Update, update, update! Regular PC maintenance can even help speed up and ensure your programs run more efficiently.

INFORMATION

"Warning" If you, your kids or grand kids take pics from your phone---WATCH THIS! This is truly alarming - please take the time to watch. At the end they'll tell you how to set your phone so you don't run this risk! PLEASE PASS THIS INFO TO ANYONE YOU KNOW WHO TAKES PICTURES WITH THEIR CELL OR SMART PHONE AND POSTS THEM ONLINE. I want everyone of you to watch this and then be sure to share with all your family and friends. It's REALLY important info, about what your posting things on your cell phones can do TO YOU!!! Too much technology out there these days so Beware.....PLEASE TAKE THE TIME TO WATCH THIS VIDEO, AND TAKE THE RECOMMENDED PRECAUTIONS. If you have children or grandchildren you NEED to watch this. I had no idea this could happen from taking pictures on the blackberry or cell phone. It's scary.

Editor's Desk

My fellow "Wingers". One more time....

We have had a number of seasoned members in Chapter E and as we look toward the future, I would like to add a yesteryear section to our newsletter. So please dig around those boxes, drawers or storage places and pull out those old photos of you and other members from day ago.

Past rides, motorcycle events...if you can recall, please submit a short paragraph about the submission. We all like to look back sometimes! If you cannot digitalize your photos, let me know and I can bring my portable scanner to our gathering and scan them.

Thanks and Happy and safe riding!

Please submit all articles and pictures to the following address;

seadoggw@att.net.

Thanks and safe

riding!!!
